1. [redacted] reports first impressions from [redacted] that the local officers with whom he is working are bright, but totally new to the subject of Soviet activities. He also reports that the working situation -- compared with his previous trip in '68 -- is changed very much for the better -- in terms of relations within the US staff.

2. More on [redacted] TDY to Saigon. The course which he presented there concentrated on the problems of Communism and counter-intelligence in a "post-hostilities" situation in Vietnam. The major stress in the Communist phase was on their organizational and tactical techniques for subversion. 3. The Introduction to Communism course just completed included a greater variety of speakers than has previously been the case. Non SIC participants included [redacted]. Several students of older vintage suggested that something of this kind should be attempted every four to five years. A review seminar on Communist developments would seem in order.
